

Table Linens

After your guests have gone home, and your linens are rolled up and put on the side, don't wait too long before you bring your tablecloths, placemats and napkins in to us for professional cleaning.

Prolonged delays will make stain removal more difficult, if not impossible. The longer you wait the more likely the stain will oxidize and become permanent.

Also, be wary of home remedies – often the wrong remedy can set a stain and make it more difficult to remove. The best action you can take is to soak up as much of the stain as possible and bring it in for cleaning.

Keep your heirloom table linens looking their best for future generations with prompt, regular professional care.
